Kayla Ford

Kayla is an Alberta Beauty and a careered woman, standing almost 6' with heels! She is always on the go whether it be modelling part time or working on fabulous hair styling at her job.

She is currently working on her first build, a rat rod with a co-mechanic. Talking about things that make her wild are old muscle cars, and trucks with lots of horsepower. That mechanic happens to be a friend turned more when things got heated up in the garage, on the rat rod - talking about a Dom and Letty scene from Fast and Furious, you know the one where Dom grabs Letty's ass and pulls her up close and onto his Charger.....

This girl loves anything with pistons. From mountain sledding, to quading, race cars, trucks and all the burnouts and events one can handle at a race track.

Kayla aspires to keep doing what she's doing and more. Her goals are constantly being met and sharing her art with fans is just another satisfying feeling of motivation.

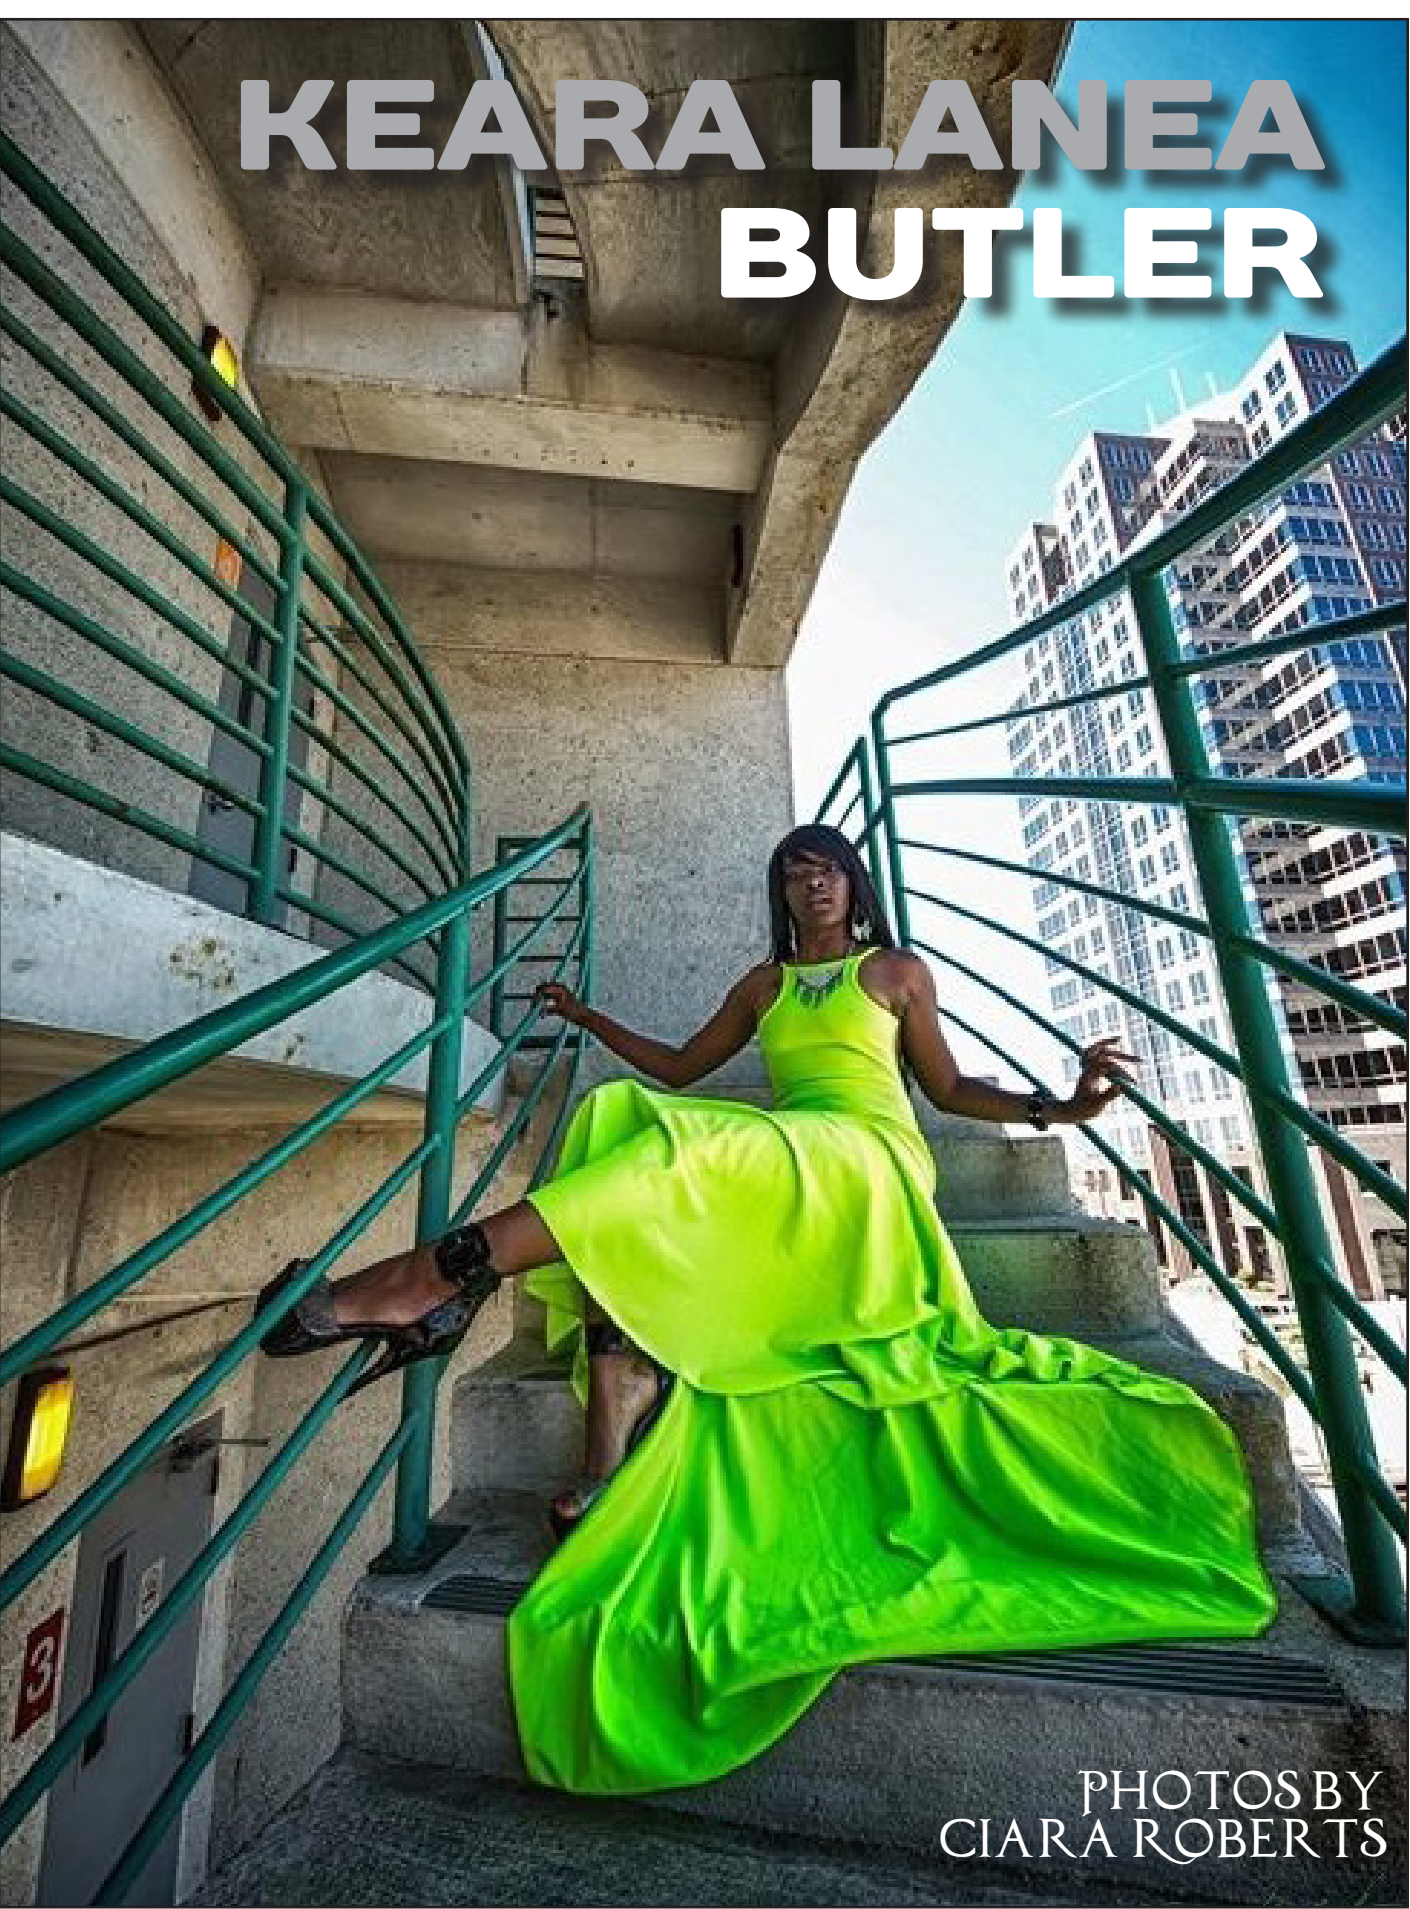

The Brightest Smiles Shields the Darkest Moments. To talk about me would be describing every little chocolate girl with a yearning for freedom. Freedom from her mind and the society that tries to fill it with lies of impurity and imperfection. As an aspiring model I found the silent strength to smile within with the joy and light for a passion that found me. Runway was my release from the frustration that built within me from the stares and ill remarks of my peers. Now what I see as my individually, haunted me as youth and into my early 20s. The power I gave others is remarkable now that I have reached the understanding of my own Self-Worth. Beauty has no age, color, weigh, and is filled with beautiful imperfections.

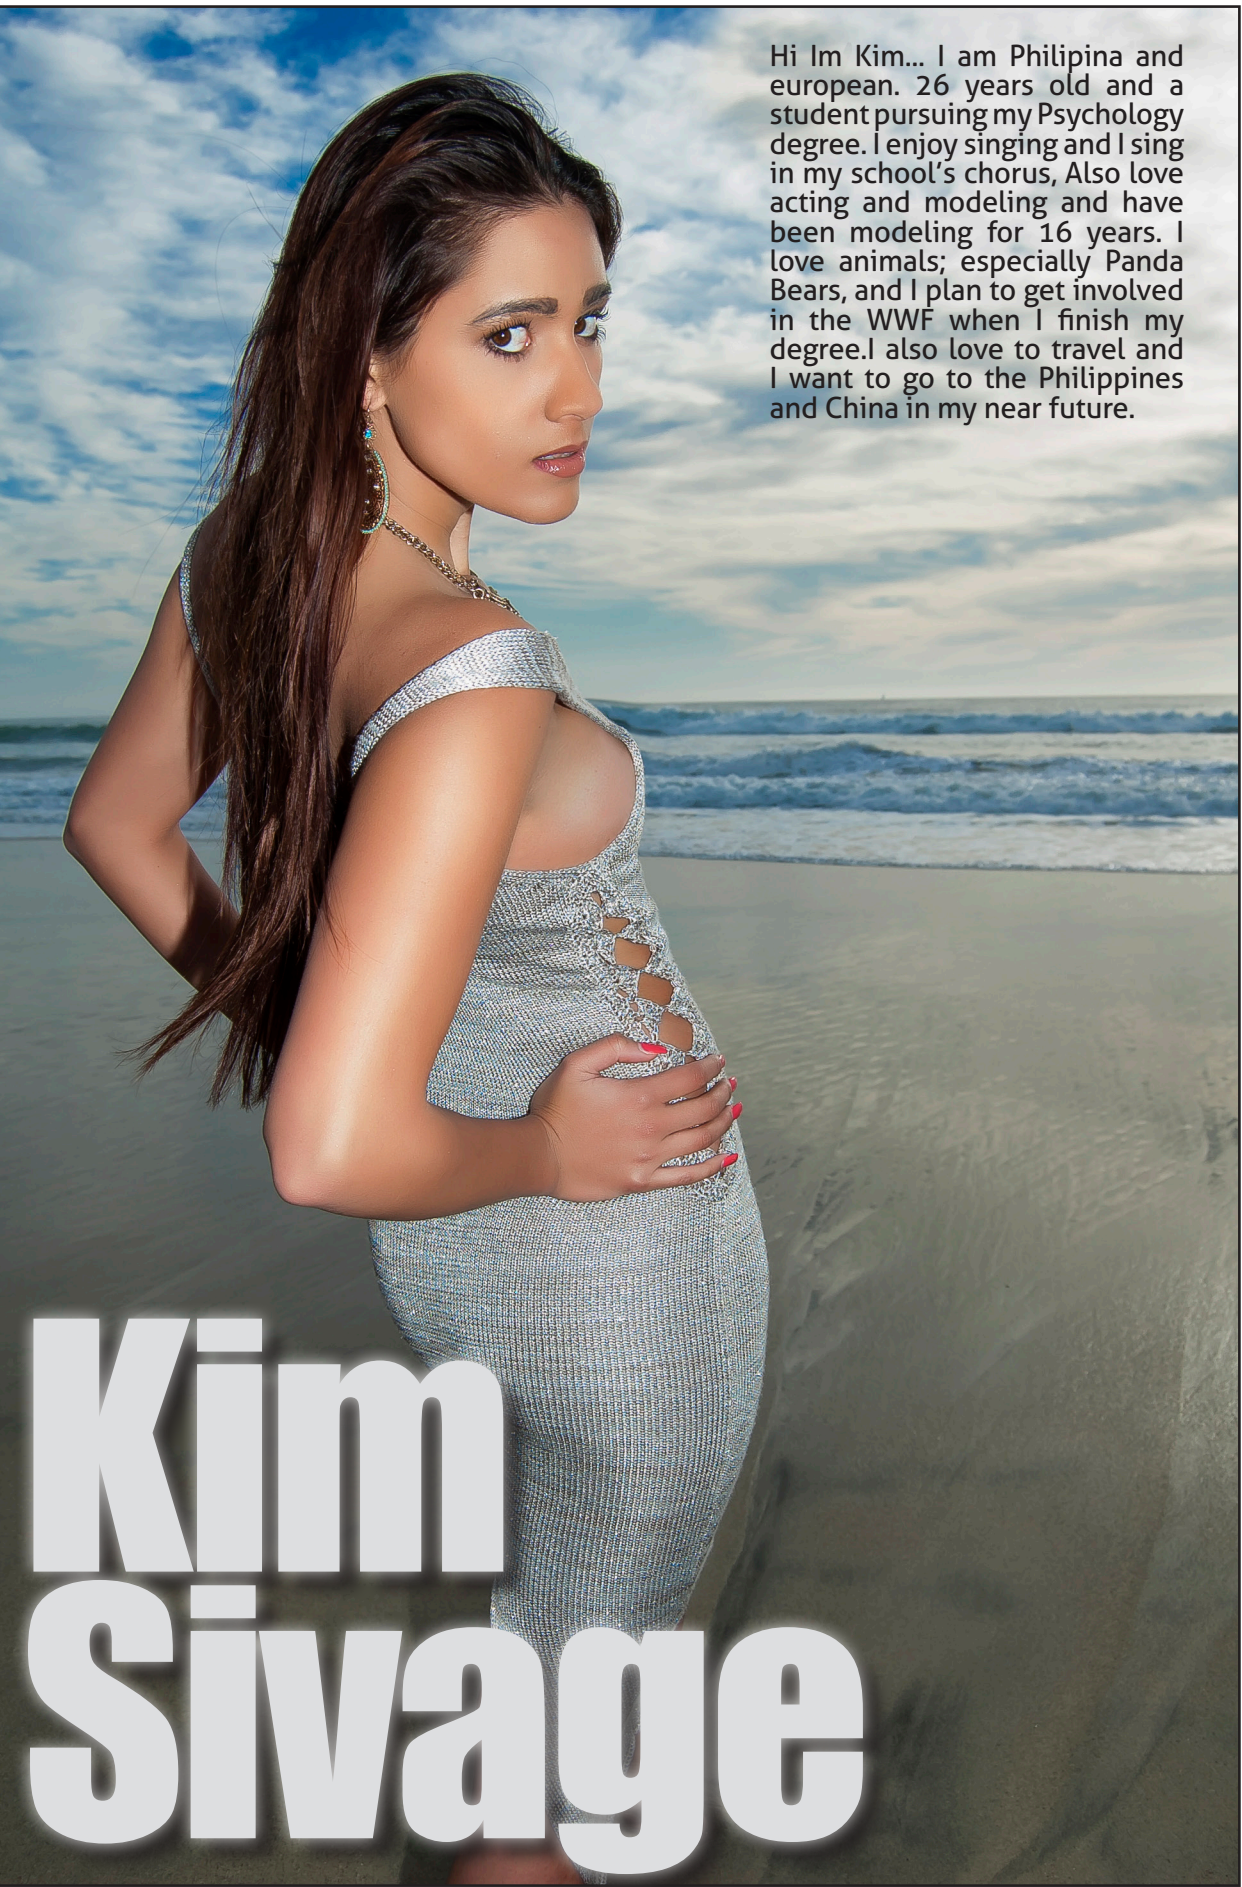

I have been privileged to showcase my talents in a couple local shows and building my brand with photographers has been my current endeavor. I participated in The Vogue Supermodel Show presented by Katherine Neal in 2007. As fortunate as I was to have 1 show under my belt I was still enrolled at John Casablanca's Model and Talent Agency in Raleigh, NC. Upon graduating from the agency classes I was also graduating high school and decided that education was more important to continuing my modeling career. More Recently I was a participant in The Stoplight Fashion Show in February of this year. The show was produced by Giovanni Hood and Keyanah Llyod.

Among the List of fashion shows and creative photographic moment I included my own flare to Networking. My approach to networking has taken on its own name within my branding. "Speak Up" means more than just saying hello or adding someone on social media, it means find your purpose and passionately pursue it. No one knows who you are or what you stand for unless you "Speak Up". Apply it to your life, business, relationships, friendships, and increase your motivation. My motivation to "Speak Up" came from the lack of inner support for myself and motivation to push my brand. I found the motivation to succeed and excel in the big brown eyes of a pure soul that calls me MOMMY. Of course, being a single mother to a fiery three year old Princess has shaped my QUEEN Mentality. ..After all, I am raising Royalty and the heir to my Throne.

I want to wrap this article up by thanking the incredible Robert Boulanger for the awesome opportunity to spill my soul on his pages. I really appreciate the continued push to be GLAMOROUS.

LYNDSEY ANNE

I began modeling in Tallahassee, FL when I was real young with the Barbizon Modeling and Acting Company. They taught everything I could ever want to know. They sent me to California for IMTA. Which is basically a giant competition for agencies and schools to notice you from all across the world. It's really cool. Once I got into high school I took a break from all of it. I had my daughter young and after having her something clicked. I wanted to be that mom that she would look at one day and brag. What better way then to get back into this game! I began very slowly. It's not easy getting into this world as an adult. But I kept going and eventually found the brand IBMS. The have helped me so much and helping me take giant steps instead of baby steps. I'm excited to see my future and thankful for the people who have gotten me here.
